Which Summer Camp?

One fine spring day, Robby came home with a summer camp brochure. He was very excited. When he saw his father, he asked:

“Dad, can I go to an outdoor adventure camp this summer?”

His father was very surprised.

“Another one? I thought you had already made your choice!”

“Such a big decision to make”, thought Robby as he rolled his eyes and went into the house.

In the past week, Robby had brought home four different camp brochures. Each time, he asked his parents if he could go.

On Monday, he came home with information about a music camp. He loved music!

On Wednesday, it was the sports camp. He really wanted to go to that one because ALL of his friends were going.

Then, on Thursday, came the science camp. Robby was good in science and his father was a fan of Albert Einstein.

Robby went to his room and sat down at his desk. He began reading the different brochures. Everything looked like so much fun. This would be a difficult decision!

Robby knew he would like the sports camp because he was a good athlete. He was also a good musician and could improve his guitar skills. On the other hand, experimenting in science would be a blast! He remembered the rocket that he had made there last summer.

Finally, he looked at the pictures on the outdoor adventure brochure. He knew he would love to canoe, explore caves, hike through the forest and go fishing! New activities would be great, he thought.

Robby suddenly knew which camp he was going to pick.
